

“Will You Still Love Me Tomorrow?”

It's been a rocky road. Did I expect differently? Everything about this disease is horrible. It not only has affected Bob, it's also been life changing for me, Bob's family, my family, and our friends. There's no normal anymore and everyday can be a challenge. My mantra has become “Dementia Sucks!”.

I had written before about putting Bob on a waiting list at my preferred Memory Care Facility. I was hopeful that something would open up soon and he would be getting placed. That's not happening and Bob's need for professional care 24/7 is increasing. And my insanity is increasing.

So, I shifted gears and made lots of phone calls and did some tours of other facilities. I chose a small warm welcoming Senior Living Facility in La Mesa. Not as close to Alpine as I would like but everything else about it was great. They were willing to do a respite/trial period so that I can keep him on the wait list at the Alpine facility. This move doesn't have to be permanent if it does not work out. That was reassuring to me.

The ton of paperwork, assessments, doctor's appointments, and general preparation that ensued was enough to make me go nuts. But I got through it and Bob is moving into his new home today. Yes, today. Hard to believe that the car is packed and ready to go and that I'm calm enough to be writing this blog. He's still in his PJ's, sound asleep in front of the TV in his recliner. He knows nothing of the move later today.

The day that I made the decision and placed the deposit was the worst. Even with prayer, family support, and the head knowledge that I was doing the right thing, I still had a heavy heavy heart. What is so strange, is that Bob told me

